CROSS TAGLIAMENTO

Meanwhile Conferences Are Being Held in Rome—Substantiate Story of Capture of American Soldiers on West Front.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

Infantry men of the American overseas forces have had their first clash with the Germans in a front line trench position and three Americans were killed, five wounded and twelve captured.

The Germans attacked at daybreak on November 3 under cover of a heavy fog, during which isolated a short section occupied by a company of Americans and apparently left the little force at the mercy of their enemies.

The fact that one wounded German was taken by the Americans leads to the belief that the attacking party did not remain to further contest the position but were content to slip back to their protecting line with their prisoners.

That American troops who received intensive training in the trench had held their first fight with the enemy was intimated on Saturday in an official statement from Berlin announcing the capture of "North American" soldiers. A cable dispatch from the American army headquarters in France also served to prepare the American public for the news of the engagement though intimating that the artillery activity was above normal although not acting near as intense as other parts of the front.

Italy.

While General Cadorna's forces are holding the invading Austro-German hordes along the Tagliamento, an Italian naval bulletin referring to intense activity in the gulf of Triest indicates that the Adriatic may soon be the scene of important developments and turning point of the present struggle in the theatre of war. Meanwhile France and Great Britain are rushing their greatest military and governmental leaders to aid Italy.

Premier Lloyd George, General Sir William Robertson, chief of imperial staff British army, Lieutenant General J. C. Smuts, the forceful South African commander and other officials of his country with French and British who is heading the French delegation are on their way to Rome for a conference with the war chief, presumably to map out an intensive campaign involving the Italian forces reinforced in both man power and material drawn from France and Great Britain.

In Flanders only minor operations are reported, these being confined to artillery activity and small raids in the Rive Crossed.

Italy's situation becomes increasingly grave today with the announcement from Rome that the Tagliamento river, which General Cadorna had established as his new line, had been crossed by the Austro-German invaders.

The crossing of the river apparently has not been in sufficient force to compel General Cadorna to abandon his lines, but the Teutonic commanders undoubtedly will make the most of it, especially as they have forced a debouch against the Italian position north and south of the point where they gained a footing on the west bank of the stream.

This process is already under way as intimated by the fact that Rome feels the increasing Austro-German pressure against the Italian left wing, where the crossing was made.

Near Pinzano.

The spot selected by the enemy for the successful attempt near Pinzano, about forty miles from the mouth of the river and about seventeen miles from Udine, was a point where the south begins to disappear, the ground rising perceptibly and the river lowering down. If General Cadorna decides to abandon the present lines, at which it is by no means certain that he intended to fight more than a delaying action, his next natural stand for the defense of Venice will be Levizia, ten to fifteen miles further west, or finally at the Piave, seven miles further in that direction.

Situation Grave.

Meanwhile, as the opposing armies are doubling for the temporary mastery of the sector, the entente leaders, including the British and French leaders and military advisors, are in council in Rome to decide what the situation, while undoubted, is recognized as grave, coupled as the powerful attack from the east is with the threat of a danking movement by the Austro-German forces southwards into the Trentino to the west of the present battle front.

FARM SECRETS OF A SUCCESSFUL FARMER

JOHN E. KENNEDY WRITES FOR SYSTEM ON THE FARM OF HIS PLANS.

INTERESTING ARTICLE

Explains Farming by Up-to-Date Methods That Bring Results in the Cash End of the Business.

In the November issue of "System on the Farm," an eastern publication, is an interesting article, illustrated by pictures, on "How I Help My Men Back More." It is written by John E. Kennedy, whose Oak Lawn farm, where he has his herds of valuable short horn cattle, is considered one of the model farms of the country by the editor of the magazine. Mr. Kennedy gives many secrets that may help others to make a success of their own farms. The article is as follows:

"When other farmers in this vicinity were having difficulty in finding help, I had all of the help I needed, and turned down several applications from good workmen I could not use. The case with which I can get good labor, I am quite sure, is largely due to the fact that I pay them considerably more than do other farmers, but I am not farming for the fun of it, and I don't pay these wages just for the sake of having plenty of men around. I pay them more because I know I can make a profit on the higher wage. Two or three men get $75 a month, and each of the others $40 a month. The higher priced men are married and get their houses and quite a share of their living, in addition to their salaries.

"In order to make a profit when paying these higher wages I consider it essential to make it possible for my men to earn more for me as well as for themselves. In order that they may earn more, I have carefully planned the work so that the utmost can be accomplished.

"I have provided labor-saving devices wherever possible, so that each man can accomplish more in less time.

One of the best indications that the men are loyal and appreciate these helps in their work is the following illustration: I told every man that my plan in handling the manure output was to haul it all out in the spring, and when the job was done to turn the manure spreader so that the machinery would not rust after being away for the summer. Ever since, this man has taken it upon himself to clean up the two spreaders without being told. In one case he was doing it on Sunday. That indicates the loyalty of the man, and is similar to the faithful services I get from the other men.

"Unfortunately, I have so much outside business to attend to that I cannot work with the men in the fields as much as some farm owners do, which only makes it all the more essential that I plan the work very carefully.

"My main source of income is from my herd of pure bred Shorthorn cattle. The hogs serve as a valuable second source, and occasionally I have hay and a little grain to sell.

For example, I raised fifty acres of wheat for the government—or rather, for the country, because we seem to be in such great need of that crop, and averaged better than thirty-nine bushels per acre.

"The most important crop I grew is a bi-annual clover. This produces an abundance of hay—three tons to the acre—and cutting as a rule—and also has a wonderfully valuable effect on the soil. We have had more or less trouble in this section of Wisconsin by having the clover freeze out, especially new seeding. For this reason I have adopted a plan which assures us a good crop of clover as a rule, assures us a good crop of clover until spring. I wait until the new clover has made enough of a start, then plow up the clover and cut it in corn.

"A good many people object to this plan because they say they do not have enough time in the spring to do their plowing and get the ground in when it should be in the ground.

MORE FISH FOR SALE AT MUNICIPAL MARKET THURSDAY

As a result of the demand for fish on the part of the public it has been decided by the city officials to order one thousand pounds of fish to be sold at the municipal market on Thursday. Last week only five hundred pounds were placed on the market and it was sold during the first hour that the market was open.

and bale part of the crop. It takes just about one-fourth the space in the mow for a ton of hay that is baled, in comparison with the space required when the hay is loose.

"One simple device at the cow barn saves the men a lot of time and labor.

"It's nothing but just a long narrow feed bin just in front of the stall. While this feed bin is only eight inches wide at the top, it holds 600 bushels of grain, and needs to be filled only two or three times a day. There are as many partitions in the bin as there are cows, so that it is possible to put in mixed ration differing in each bin to necessary. When the stock is to fed it is necessary for the men to take the feed bin out of the row, dislodge it to the cover, measure and turns back the cover, walks down the row, lifting the feed out of the bin directly in front of each cow and into her manger. The men have expressed their appreciation of this time-saver a great many times, and I think they work with a much better spirit than if they had to carry feed every morning and night.

"Because steel posts are used, it takes not more than 14 days a year to care for a mile of fencing, aside from the time lost on the weeds under the fence in the fall.

"The cost of the grass in my wooded pasture froze out in spots last winter.

"I didn't let go, but the men have just as early in the spring as possible and in that way prevented a great deal of damage.

"In handling my clover, I did just once. In fact, I never figure on cutting any crop sooner than once a year. About four weeks after the crop is cut turn the cattle into the field and let them pasture it the rest of the season, leaving a good long growth on for protection during the winter.

"I do not ask my men to work long hours, except in the rarest emergency cases. With these labor-saving devices they are usually able to get the work all done in plenty of time to quit at 6 o'clock every night. There are a few chores to do this, of course, but these are done early in the evening."

CAPT. J. T. STONE TO SPEAK AT "Y" MEETING

Captain Stone of Camp Grant, Will Emphasize Necessity of Subscribing to "Y" War Fund.

It is hoped by "Y" officials that over four hundred men of Janesville and surrounding towns in the county will take advantage of hearing Captain John T. Stone of Camp Grant speak at the big luncheon at the local exposition building tomorrow noon at 12:30. Captain Stone, who formerly was pastor of the Fourth Presbyterian church in Chicago, is now giving his time to aid the Y. M. C. A. at the Rockford cantonment.

The meeting tomorrow will mark the opening of the national campaign to secure $30,000,000 for the country's share of the national association funds.

The actual drive will not begin until next Sunday and will continue for eight days, but the work of organizing the county, forming teams, and all other details of the campaign will be outlined at the luncheon Tuesday.

All men who would like to hear one of Chicago's most famous speakers should take advantage of this golden opportunity. Captain Stone, in his work at Camp Grant, is making a host of friends, besides furthering the association work among the soldiers more than any other one man in the cantonment. Local people who have heard the captain before in his Chicago church, are loud in their praise, and are congratulating "Y" authorities on the success of their work.

His talk will deal chiefly with an explanation of the wonderful work the Y. M. C. A. is doing in the nation's army camps. He will emphasize the necessity of subscribing to the fund to the limit, and urge all the men present to do their utmost in raising the money. There will be no solicitation of money at the meeting Tuesday, the need of everyone subcribing to the fund will be the main topic for discussion.

That the Y. M. C. A. is achieving remarkable results among the soldiers is conceded by everyone. Nearly every soldier is taking advantage of this opportunity.

BADGERS WIN FROM GOPHERS FOR FIRST TIME IN FIVE YEARS

Wisconsin Played a Brilliant Game, With Forward Passing by Simpson as the Feature of the Game.

Wisconsin scored its first victory in five years over Minnesota on the football field Saturday at the Badger stadium by the score of 10 to 7. It was a regular Minnesota-Wisconsin game, with the usual hard playing and the men to prevent the famous Minnesota shift from doing its damage.

The Badgers outplayed the Gophers throughout the game, with the exception of about five minutes when Minnesota scored following a determined drive down the field for a touchdown. This was the only time during the game that the Gophers were dangerous, as the ball was continually in the hands of the Badgers.

Coch Williams had his men prepared to meet the Minnesota shift and they responded to the extent that very few gains of any distance were made. The Badger line held like a wall with the one exception when the Minnesota team pushed the ball over for a touchdown in the second quarter.

Wisconsin on the other hand displayed some of the best open field play ever seen on the Badger field. They used the forward pass continually, resulting in many gains, although many of the passes went uncompleted, the Gopher backs were unable to intercept them and gain possession of the ball. Simpson stood behind the line and threw forward passes to one end and the other with regularity. The Minnesota line was so strong that gains were impossible unless the air route was used.

The strength of the Gopher line was responsible for the small score, as the Badgers had three chances to score late in the game but lacked the drive to send the ball across. Three times they were in the ten yard zone with our downs to make the distance, but each time the Gophers arose to the occasion and held like veterans. Simpson then used good judgment and completely changed the style of play, using the forward pass to do the scoring.

Wilson grabbed a fifteen yard pass in the third quarter, scoring the touchdown which clinched the game for the Badgers. By a series of passes and end runs the ball was advanced by the Badgers steadily until the fifteen yard line was reached. Simpson then pulled the unexpected and shot a pass to Weston, who had escaped through the Gopher second defense who carried the ball over the line.

Simpson was easily the star for the Badgers by his playing and the excellent judgment he used of plays. Bondi, Kelley and Weston also performed well.

The game marked the dedication of the new stadium at Madison. Between halves the ceremony was withheld, with a crack company of university cadets marching with the university band. To complete the ceremony, flag raising took place, with President Van Hise and other notables present.

PLAYER LIMIT WILL BE CUT IN LEAGUES

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS) Cleveland, Nov. 5.—As a war time measure, the American league probably will cut its player limit to twenty or twenty-one men next season, according to James C. Dunn, president of the Cleveland club. The question will be settled at the annual meeting to be held in Chicago the latter part of this month.

Dunn believes that all of the clubs are carrying too many pitchers and that each team can reduce its roster without impairing its strength. Six pitchers are sufficient for any major league, he believes, providing the six are willing to work and keep in condition.

"With a schedule calling for 140 games," Dunn said, "it will be possible to get along with fewer men. It is my belief that a club does its best when a manager works four pitchers in rotation and keeps two in reserve."

ELDER JONES TO RETURN AS MANAGER OF BROWNS St. Louis, Nov. 5.—Reports that Elder Jones would not return to manage the St. Louis team of the American League next season is news to Ted G. Ball, president and majority stockholder of the club. Ball brands the report as "lies."

"I have said that Jones will manage the team in 1918 and now repeat it," Ball said. "President Johnson of the American League, Jones and myself talked this matter over and we decided that the club's best interests were best served by retaining Jones."

There was never any question of Jones' ability in our minds. Jones, however, believed he was not welcome here and was willing to do anything that was for the best interests of the club. We told him to come back. And he agreed."

FIELD GOALS GIVE GAME TO EDGERTON

SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE

Edgerton, Nov. 5.—Edgerton high school football team defeated Stoughton high on their home grounds at Stoughton Saturday by a score of 6 to 0. Stoughton won the toss and elected to defend the north goal. The first of the fourth quarter there were several exchanges of punts. Edgerton punted to Stoughton's thirty yard line and recovered on a fumble. Edgerton then failed to make gains and on the last down Curran dropped the ball and kicked off from the 10 yard line. Edgerton then kicked off and Stoughton failed to make gains, punted. Edgerton then returned the ball by a series of end runs and line smashes to Stoughton's 30 yard line and Curran successfully kicked goal again. Stoughton then tried hard to score, opening up on their forward passes, which were intercepted by the Edgerton backs, and the game was on the ball in Edgerton's possession on Stoughton's 40 yard line. PREPARATION.

Our soldier boys are going into the trenches over there in France, and over a million more of our fighting
young men are training in this country.
Many contingents are already enroute for the scene of the final training or are in actual preparation for the services they enlisted to accomplish. The task of driving the sun back from the west front appears to be the work for which the American troops are designed for. Thus far we are not at war with Austria, and while it is but technicality, we can not send men to that battle front.
What we can do, however, is to take the place of the French and English in the trenches on the west front and permit those nations to send their seasoned troops to fight against the unreconciled foe. Already Berlin armories they have taken as prisoners some of our troops. God rest their souls in peace. If this be true, as the fate of the first prisoners captured will be something that will make a rest of the army close their lips in a grim manner that betokens no good to the German nation. With a price set upon their heads these American soldiers are fighting over there for you and me and for our children and grandchildren. This is not a war of the minute nor of the week, but for the future. Meanwhile these boys are in training near at home. Have you done your share by contributing to the fund for the Company C boys of the 331st machine gun battery, now in training at Camp Grant? If not, why not? What excuse can you offer not giving your bit to swell their company fund and make their lot easier?
Leave your contribution at the Gazette
office and it will be forwarded to the proper authorities and utilized for the best interests of the boys.
One dollar, two, five, ten or more will all be acceptable. It is not a Janesville proposition, but a countywide one, as the boys from all parts of the county go to make up its ranks. Will not your Thanksgiving dinner taste a bit better if you know the Rock county boys are going to have something on their table that Uncle Sam does not furnish them with? Certainly it will, so take time by the forelock and send in your contribution. These same battery boys may be in France
within a few months, so why delay?
Better good solid appreciation now that counts, rather than flowers and prayers later. Make your contribution as liberal as possible and send it in early.MILK PRICES.
The milk producers have agreed to take the price set for milk fixed by the special state committee and the federal Inspector and from now until January will sell their product at a less price than they received for the month of October. Now the question is, will the consumer benefit?
That has been the whole fight. If the farmer has to sell his produce for less, will the middle man reduce his price accordingly? If not what was the discussion all about any way? Why convey the idea the farmer was the holding man because milk cost more than formerly, if now the farmer is to receive less for his product and the boosted price retain in vogue? Perhaps the Rock County Board of Defense might take an action in this matter, unless this time is too busy on other matters, if not, it might be referred to the state council of defense and see what they say. The answer would be interesting to thousands of families now paying the same price for their pints and quarts as they did when milk cost the middlemen three forty-two instead of three twenty-two, as at present. Just twenty cents a hundred pounds, but why not figure it in? When milk was selling for five cents a quart, the farmer and the milk distributor made what was termed a fifty-fifty split.
Why not now? Answer echoes "Why not?"CONTAGIOUS DISEASE.
With the opening of any winter season there always comes the dread of contagious disease. There is something in the atmosphere that causes these conditions and the greatest precautions must be taken to see that it does not spread and become a menace to the community. One of the surest preventions of a spread of contagion
is to call a physician the moment
there is any question of the ailment and have the patient examined thoroughly. It is only Saturday last that a man talked of the sickness of his child and discovered that scatlet fever had been the trouble. The case was so slight, neither he or his wife had called a physician and consequently no one knows how many persons have been exposed. The great antidote for disease is precaution. It is half the battle.

THE STREETS.

It has always been a question in the minds of many citizens why so many streets should remain in a torn-up state when cold weather comes.
Way Janesville can not have its streets finished during the summer months the same as any other community? It would appear, except for minor repairs, that August 1st is the date set for starting construction of new streets and the cold weather always comes before they are completed. Why is this? Who is to blame that the contracts are not let earlier so work can be started in time to be finished before winter sets in?
Certainly we have had enough discussion about Main, and Franklin streets for the last two years not to have had this work started early enough for the summer to have been finished by this time. There may be some good excuse, but thus far no solution has been offered. Meantime winter approaches and our streets are torn up and what is the answer?In this world, the next and then the
who burn the candle at both ends, but
who burn the candle at both ends, but remember the fireworks are ex-THE JANEVILLE DAILY GAZETTE, MONDAY, NOVEMBER 5, 1917.
ENGLISH IS TAUGHT AT CAMP GRANT FOR BENEFIT OF COMPANY

Camp Grant, 331st Machine Gun Battalion, Nov. 5.—When Uncle Sam selected the men of this country as warriors in the fight for democracy, he did not make any exemption for the fellows that were unable to speak English or who found difficulty in understanding it. The result was that when the men of Co. C, 331st Machine Gun Battalion were assembled, it was found that several of the men were unable to understand the commands of the officers. Consequently, they were unable to progress with drill at the desired rate of speed. The result was that an English school was organized.

Company C now has an English school of the highest order. Corporal Cornelius Cunningham of Beloit has been chosen as principal of the school and has general supervision of the school and the work. Speaking, reading, writing and writing of English is taught. The school is conducted in a mess hall each evening with the exception of Saturday from 5:45 to 6:30 p.m. Attendance is compulsory for all men who are unable to speak or understand the English language.

Under direction of Corporal Cunningham the school has been given a good start, the work and classes are definitely organized and the men are already making marked improvement. The Pinto method of teaching English is employed. Stress is laid upon commercial or domestic English, but primarily upon building up a knowledge of the language which will make the men understand the military terms and expressions and execute properly the command of the officers.

Corporal Cunningham has evolved a very efficient method of organizing his classes. There are four classes for foreign tongues and three for English speaking men. For every class there is a teacher and for the foreign classes an assistant that is proficient in both languages. The first class is under the tutelage of Private Oscar Carlson and is for the men of Scandinavian descent only; the second is for Greeks, assisted by the direction of Private Beloit, assisted by Corporal Edmund Dunnigan. Private Roland Hanaman of Beloit teaches English to seventy naturalized Italians and has Private Vannie for his assistant. Class D is conducted by Private McDonough, assisted by Private Evanow. This class is the largest of the school and is comprised of men speaking the Slavonic tongue. The other three classes are taught by Private Stoen, Beloit, and Cannon have as members the native born who have difficulty in understanding, speaking or writing English, due to lack of schooling or other causes.

Naturally the fundamental purpose of this school is to give each man a fair knowledge of the language, thus making him better fit for service in which he is now engaged. Corporal Cunningham is aiming to impart to the men the maximum knowledge in the minimum of time, energy and effort, and he is to be commended very highly on the very excellent start he has made. He is hard at work at the present time on plans which will improve his system to a still greater extent and his applying his best efforts toward making the work not only instructive, but interesting to the men.

There are no more early risers in the 331st Machine Gun Battalion, and won't be for the rest of the winter, due to the fact that the winter schedule went into effect yesterday and the boys of the battalion are more than pleased.

Owing to the approaching cold weather and the late arrival of downpouch morning, the time of getting up has been set back until 6:15 o'clock and the men are still talking about it. Also retreat, which formerly came at five-forty in the afternoon, now comes at four-forty, and gives the men much more time for play. There was much joy when the new schedule appeared on the bulletin boards of the different companies and although the men have been expecting this for some time, coming as it did, they were wholly unprepared for the shock.

The new schedule:

Another large blanket was issued to the men in the stables last evening and it came in mighty handy as it has been snowing here for the past two days and the weather is anything but mild.

Private Fanor, while boxing with another man in the stables yesterday, was clipped on the chin by his opponent and when he awoke he insisted that he was kicked by one of the mutes.

The boys are all happy today because they signed the payroll again and are now debating as to how long they will have to wait until they get their money, but the consensus of opinion is that they will be paid with in the next few days.

Sergeant Major Kurberg has been expecting a box of cigars for the past three days, but at the present writing they have not shown up. He is wondering whether they have been held up as dynamite.

Many of the boys are planning on attending the Hallowe'en party at the roller rink this evening and those who have no desire to roller skate are going to a big Hallowe'en dance at Rockford.

Private Hanaman of Beloit has volunteered his services to the company orchestra and in the way that he pounds the drums he will be very much appreciated by the men.

Christmas parcels are already beginning to arrive in camp and Private Montgomery and Quinn have already received bundles with the Merry Xmas cards attached.

Private Fife had the honor of throwing the wrestling bear at the Y. M. C. A. the other evening, and his demonstration of his superiority over the others was given two dollars for the feat.

Private training is evincing itself in various ways. Our diminutive supply sergeant, Raymond Gallagher, is learning the art of economy. At present he is saving the tips of his shoe laces which he expects to sell to the junk man.

Due to a typographical error it was stated in Monday's paper that Private Sergeant Howard Smith was the recipient of a box of cigars. Sergeant Smith has not known it to date the cigars haven't been received, but he is anxiously waiting for them.

Private McCue of the news staff, was the recipient today of two large boxes, and the men of the company are still trying to figure out who is the sender of most of these because each day he receives a box and they come from Jonesville, Mineral Point, Milwaukee, Chicago and Detroit.

As the writer was standing in the stable this afternoon listening to the instructor and at the same time gazing into the eyes of the mule, my thoughts constantly turned to "the flowing quotation from Grey's "Elegy":

"Full many a gem of purest ray serene,
From dark unfathomed caves of ocean beat,
Full many a flame is born to blush unseen,
And waste its sweetness on the desert air."

Fred Moore of Elkhorn, has the honor of being the smallest man in the company, holding a non-commissioned officer's place. Moore has been a non-commissioned officer since his arrival in camp, and to see the way he has been working one would easily realize why he was given the rank of sergeant. The men of Co. B are mighty glad to have him, as he is very popular and as successful at entertaining as commanding. The man that can match him with "Shorty" and him is hard to be found.

Present day mules not being so much given to longevity as their Biblical brothers, have had to content themselves with what glory they could command by reason of the action of their hind legs.

Imagine, gentle reader, the surprise and wonder in the men of the Machine Gun Battalion when after being marched to the stables this afternoon, they were treated to a lecture on the mule from Missouri and the care of said animal and its uses in war, after having always heretofore considered it a thing to be shunned and withheld of little interest as consequence.

MR. FISKE O'HARA DELIGHTS AUDIENCE

Popular Irish Actor-Singer Welcomed by Enthusiastic Crowd at Myers Theatre Last Evening.

This time Fiske O'Hara presented a new Irish comedy—“The Man from Wicklow.” The play was in three acts and in the work of Anna Nichols. The scene of the comedy was laid in Wicklow, Ireland, and the time the early part of the last century. Mr. O'Hara played the role of Robert Edmund O'Donovan, the dashing son of a young Irishman which he is ideally suited to portray. It was a love story, of course, one of those charming, wholesome plays which appeals to all classes of theatre-goers.

Mr. O'Hara sang a number of new songs written for his use in “The Man from Wicklow,” and he rendered them in his own inimitable manner.

A able support was given the star in the other leads by Patricia Clary, as Eileen Norwood, and by Mae Donnelly as Judith Norwood. The rest of the cast contained some notable names, also.

FOOTVILLE

Footville, Nov. 5.—Miss Daisy Griffin passed away yesterday at the home of Dr. Lacey of this village, after an illness of three weeks at the age of thirty years. She was operated on for appendicitis at the Janesville hospital, but her condition gradually grew worse until she came home with Dr. Lacey for several years, during which time she had made a host of friends with her charming ways. She leaves to mourn her loss, three sisters in Elgin Springs, Wis., two brothers in Elgin, Ill., and one brother of Genesee, Illinois. The funeral will be held Tuesday afternoon at the home of Dr. Lacey, after six of her girl friends acting as pallbearers.

If Barney Dreyfuss, Pittsburgh owner, is ready to sell or trade Al Manaux, as reported, he can likely do business with McGraw. The latter has been keen on Al for some time and would just love to sign him up.

The woman who is responsible for the screen spectacles in which Geraldine Farrar has been appearing is visiting in New York. Her name is Jeanne Macpherson.

She wrote the scenarios for “Joan and the Woman,” and “The Woman God Forgot”; also “The Little American,” in which Mary Pickford was starred. Miss Macpherson is surprising young, she is just out of her teens, and, it would seem, possesses sufficient beauty to play in her own stories if she so desired.

Speaking of her work, Miss Macpherson said: “The theme is vitally important for most studios specialize in pictures that are adopted to their stars who have attained a great hold upon the public with a certain class of photoplay. Scenario writers should study the policy of the company before submitting their material.”

ONLY KIDS IN THIS COMPANY

Clarine Seymour, who is almost as large as a powder puff, arrived in Los Angeles recently from New York to play opposite Toto, the Hippodrome clown in Pathé comedies.

Miss Seymour is only eighteen years old. She, therefore, upholds the traditions of the Rolin company, the producers who have about the youngest lot of players in the business. Bebe Daniels, who plays in the Long-some Duke comedies is sixteen; while Lulu, who plays leads, is only twenty-one, and “Snub” Pollard, another prominent member of the cast, has just attained the voting age. Hal Roach, the director, is under thirty by several years. Miss Seymour was born in Brooklyn, and has had parts in serials with Mollie King and Pearl White. She weighs 100 pounds.

Virginia Holmes, five years old, playing in Essanay pictures, is extremely envious of Mary McAlister's ability to cry. On one occasion when Mary opened the flood gates of her blue orbs for an unusual inundation Baby Virginia ran to her mother and pleaded:

“Mother, spank me! I want to cry.”

About three."

"So I would have said; and 'tis not daylight until after five. We can scarce make it, yet we will try."

It was not as dark here away from the gloom of the Rock; the forest was open, and yet I will never know how D'Artigny succeeded in following that dim trail at so rapid a gait. As for me, I could see nothing of any path, and merely followed him blindly, not even certain of the nature of the ground under my feet. Again and again I tripped over some obstacle—a root, a tuft of grass—and continually unrooted branches flapped against my face. Once I fell prone, yet so noiselessly that René passed beyond view before he realized my misfortune, and returned to help me regain my feet. Not until then, I think did he comprehend the rapidity of his movements.

"Your pardon, dear girl," said his lips brushed my hair, as he held me in his arms. "I forgot all but our comrades yonder. The night is dark to your eyes."

"I can see nothing," I confessed regretfully, "yet you have no difficulty."

"Tis a woodsmen's training, I have followed many a dim trail in dark forests, and this is so plain I could keep to it on a run if necessary. Ah! the fort is awake and vigilant—that was rifle fire!"

I had not only heard the sharp reports but seen the flash of fire cleaving the darkness.

"The discharges came from the woods yonder—they were Indian guns, monsieur. See! those two last were from the stockade; I could perceive the logs in the flare."

D'Artigny crushed the man's hand in both his own, dropping the rifle barrel to the ground. His voice trembled as he made answer.

"He won the king's favor? he convinced Louis?"

"No doubt of that—never saw I a greater miracle."

"How far have we traveled, monsieur?"

"A mile, perhaps. At the crooked oak yonder we leave the stream. You met with no harm when you fell?"

"No more than a bruise. I can go on now."

We turned to the right, and plunged into the thicket, the way now so black that I grasped his jacket in fear of becoming lost. We were clambering up a slight hill, careless of everything but our footing, when there was a sudden rustling of the low branches on either side our path. D'Artigny stopped, thrusting me back, while at that very instant instinctive forms seemed to leap forth from the covert. It occurred so quickly, so silently, that before I even realized danger, he was struggling madly with the assailants. I heard the crash of blows, an oath of surprise, a guttural exclamation, a groan of pain. Hands gripped me savagely; I felt naked bodies, struggled wildly to escape, but was flung helplessly to the ground, a hand grasping my hair. I could see nothing, only a confused mass of legs and arms, but D'Artigny was still on his feet, struggling desperately. From some hand he had grabbed a rifle, and swung it crashing into the faces of those grappling him. Back he came, step by step, fighting like a fiend, until he stood over me. With one wide sweep of his clutched weapon he struck me free, a blow which shattered the gun-stock, and left him armed only with the iron bar. But the battle fury was on him; dimly I could see him towering above me, bared-headed, his clothes torn to rags, the grim barrel poised for a blow.

"St. Ann!" he cried exultantly. "Tis a good fight so far—would you have more of it?"

"Hold!" broke in a French voice from out the darkness. "What means this? Are you of white blood?"

"I have always supposed so."

"A renegade consorting with devils or the Iroquois?"

"Non Dieu! Non! An officer of Fort St. Louis."

I could see the white man thrust aside the Indian circle, and strike through. His face was invisible, although I was upon my knees now, but he was a short, heavily built fellow.

"Stand back! ay, make room. Saint Guise, we are fighting our own friends. If you are of the garrison, name yourself."

reached out his other hand, and lifted me to my feet.

"Perchance," he said coolly, "if I were a stickler for etiquette, I might ask you first for some explanation of this attack. However, we have made some heads ring, so I waive that privilege. I am the Sieur d'Artigny, a lieutenant of La Salle's."

"Mon Dieu!" the other stepped forward, his hand outstretched. "Tis no unknown name to me, although we have never before met by some chance—I am Francis de la Forest."

"La Forest! You were in France three months ago."

"Aye; I was there when Sieur de la Salle landed. He told me the whole tale. I was with him when he had audience with Louis. I am here now points, and the men divided into three camps, for where De la Durantaye stands there is no command by virtue of La Barre's commission, and knows no more of Indian war than a Quebec storekeeper. The garrison numbers fifty men, all told; two-thirds soldiers, and a poor lot."

"With ammunition and food?"

"Ampie to eat, but Bolsonron tells me with scarce a dozen rounds per man. The Iroquois are at the gates, and will attack at daylight."

"You know this?"

"The signs are plain. We passed one party clambering up the cliff—no less than fifty warriors, naked and painted for war. Tuscaroras, madame said from the words she overheard as they slipped past where we hid. 'Tis not likely they made reconnaissance alone. The Indians have been a week in this valley, and have swept all clear of our Indian allies; now they can bring their full force against the fort."

"No doubt you're right."

"'Twas my judgment, at least, and we sought help when we ran into you. What Indians have you?"

"Illini, mostly, with a band of Miami and Kickapoos. We met them at the crossing, hiding in the hills. They were sadly demoralized, and filled with horror at what they had seen, yet agreed to return here under my leadership."

"Who is their chief?"

"Old Sequitah—you know him?"

"Ay, a real warrior. 'Tis better than I dared hope, for I have been in battle with him before. Do you number a hundred?"

"And fifty more, though indifferently armed."

"And fifty more, though indifferently armed. Never have I seen the Illini in action. D'Artigny; they seem to me a poor lot, so frightened of the wolves as to be valueless."

"So they are if left to themselves, but under white leadership they stiffen. They will fight if given the Indian style. They will never stand in defense, but if we lead them to a surprise, they'll give good account of themselves. That is my plan, La Forest—that we creep up through the woods behind the Iroquois lines. They will expect no attack from the rear, and will have no guard. If we move quickly while it remains dark, we ought to get within a few yards of the red demons without discovery. They will fight desperately, no doubt, for their only hope of escape would be to either plunge down the rocky banks on either side, or cut a way through. You have been at the fort?"

"Twice before."

"Then you know the nature of the ground. 'Tis all woodland until within a few hundred yards of the gates. You recall the great rock beside the trail?"

"Ay and the view from the top."

"My plan would be to creep up that far, with flanking parties on the slopes below. In front, as you may remember, there is an open space, then a fringe of forest hiding the clearing before the stockade. The Iroquois will be gathered behind that fringe of trees waiting daylight. Is my thought right?"

"Tis the most likely way."

"Then listen; I have thought this all out. You and I, with Sequitah, will take a hundred of your Indians, cross the small river, and advance up the trail. That leaves fifty warriors to creep through the woods on either slope, twenty-five to a side, led by two couriers du bois. We will wait at the great rock, and give the signal."

"La Forest stood silent a moment, thinking; then rested his hand on D'Artigny's shoulder.

"It looks feasible enough, but the flanking parties may not reach their positions in time."

"The one from the west will not have as far to travel as we do. The other does not make so much difference, for if the Iroquois break they will come in this direction—the other side of the trail is sheer rock."

"And what about the lady?"

"I shall go with you, messieurs," I said quietly. "There will be no more danger there than here; besides, you would not leave me alone without a guard, and you will need every fighting man."

I felt the grip of René's hand, but it was La Forest's voice that spoke.

"The right ring to that, boy. D'Artigny! Madame answers my last argument. But first let us have word with the chief."

He addressed a word into the crowd of indistinguishable figures, and an Indian came forward. Dim as the light was, I was impressed with the dignity of his carriage, the firm character of his facial outline.

"I am Sequitah, chief of the Masscoucons," he said gravely, "for whom the white chief sent."

D'Artigny stepped forward, standing as erect as the other.

SELF-DENIAL MUST BE PRACTICED NOW

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Washington, Nov. 5.—The men who don the uniform of the American soldier and sailor are offering their all to their country. If it means to their lives, they are offering those who stay at home, who should be willing to contribute liberally, even if it means self-denial, to make the lives of the men at the training camps more wholesome, more enjoyable, more home-like. This is the message which has been sent to the Washington headquarters of the national committee on War Camp Community Recreation Fund by Charles E. Dawson, of Muskego, Wis., governor of the eleventh district, International Association of Rotary clubs.

Mr. Dawson has studied the situation at a number of army camps, in his report to the committee, when raising "three dollars for each soldier and sailor" to provide the best sort of entertainment for them in the communities around the camps, says in part:

"For the first time in history a definite and sustained effort is to be made to treat the soldier as a human being rather than as a part of a machine. It is the shame of every nation and ours no less than the older countries that heretofore the common soldier had no amusement open to him except the saloon, the gambling house and the cheap dance hall. He had no welcome at the front door of any wholesome house."

"We of the United States have not yet learned to give. We have congratulated ourselves that the induction of the young into the war has caused hardly a ripple in American finance. Not until our casualty list began to show that our men are actually fighting this nation's battles at the front will we wake up to the fact that there is need of real sacrifice on the part of every citizen."

"I have been told by Canadian friends of men whom they know, who have mortgaged their homes, or sold them outright and given the money to the Bone-volent Fund; I have been told of many others who set aside each month only enough to cover their barest necessities and give every other cent they can make to the fund. We of the United States will learn to give just as freely when we once appreciate what war really means."
